

When artists paint the classic portrait of a person it is usually a "picture perfect" display of how they physically look. But as we all should know by now, what's on the inside is what truly describes a person's essence. What if we reversed the idea of a portrait? Instead of painting what a person looks like, we painted who they are.

Skyla Wayrynen is a young up and coming artist from Canada's West Coast who puts her own twist on the classic portrait. She uses vibrant colours and texture to bring out a person's unique personality. Her technique is remarkable as she creates work that is expressive of the individual. It displays their truth. Unsubscribe chatted with Skyla on her life as an artist and her technique in creating masterpieces.

WHAT IS YOUR CREATIVE PROCESS WHEN YOU PAINT?

I usually do a rough draft in my sketchbook first. Or since I try to draw/ fill one page of my sketchbook a day I go back through my books to look for past ideas that I can go off of.

HOW DID YOU DISCOVER YOUR LOVE AND PASSION FOR ART?

I have been painting/ creating since literally the day I was born. So, it is a very natural process for me and just the way
